A Strange Matrimonial Case.

The conviction of Mrs. Maybrick for the murder of her husband is only one starting episode in a remarkable family history. Mrs. Maybrick is an American by birth, about twenty-six years old, and her maiden name was "Chenier." Her grandfather on the maternal side was Darius B. Holbrook, a wealthy New Yorker, and one of the best known men of his day, who died in 1858. His daughter, Carrie E. Holbrook, the mother of Mrs. Maybrick, went to Mobile, Ala., about 1856, on a visit to her uncle, Rev. J. H. Ingraham, rector of St. John's P. E. Church in that city, and famous as the author of the "Prince of the House of David." She was very popular in society, being a good conversationalist, handsome though not pretty, and quiet and prepossessing in demeanor. Among those who joined her troop of admirers was young William G. Chanler, son of one of the most prominent merchants of the city. Chanler was educated and refined, and successful in business. The two young people were mutually taken with one another, and he followed her to her home in New York city, where they were married. Returning to Mobile they lived in good style, and Mrs. Chanler increased her influence in society. She was as much of a belle as before marriage, and her society was especially sought by young men.

It was at the beginning of the war that Mrs. Chanler's path was crossed by Frank du Barry, who is said to have been a French vicomte, and who at that time was a captain of ordinance in the Confederate army. He was a remarkably handsome man and a dashing officer. He fell in with the Chanlers, and soon there was some talk of his attentions to the lady. Suddenly Mr. Chanler fell ill. He grew rapidly worse, and his relatives went to offer their assistance, but were refused admittance to the house. Chanler died, attended by no one but the young wife, and the report arose that he had been killed by her. There was no official investigation of the charge, but it affected her position, which became so unpleasant that she took her two children and moved to Macon, Ga. In less than a year she married du Barry there. Shortly afterwards du Barry was ordered to go to Europe as a representative of the Confederate government. He and his family took passage on a blockade runner, and had proceeded but a couple of days when du Barry, who had been complaining, suddenly died. The captain of the steamer proposed to return to port in order that the officer might be interred, but the widow strenuously insisted that the vessel should continue. She said she did not like the risk of turning the vessel back, and demanded that the body be cast overboard. This was done, and the vessel reached Europe in due time.

In a year or two Mrs. du Barry drifted back to New York, where she was involved in a scandal with some actor, which was published in the papers at the time and created a great sensation. After this she went again to Europe, and met and married Baron von Roque. There was shortly a scandal with him also, as it is said he was not faithful to her and at one time he gave her a beating, so she left him. It seems that they led an adventurous life together. After separating from von Roque the lady became a woman of the world, and when last heard from was filling the equivocal position of "wife" of an attaché of the British legation at Teheran, Persia.

The widow of Darius Holbrook, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Maybrick, had died in New York city in 1876. At the time of Mr. Holbrook's death, in 1858, his estate was valued at fully $1,000,000, but it consisted largely of property in Cairo, Ill., and throughout the Southwest, which greatly depreciated in value after the war. The estate had been bequeathed by Mr. Holbrook to his widow and daughters, and before the death of Mrs. Holbrook she and the latter united in placing the remnants, which embraced some valuable real estate on Fourteenth street, in New York city, in a trust for the benefit of the two Chanler children—a son named Holbrook, now dead, and Florence, the present Mrs. Maybrick. This trust was attached, in 1879, by a Trieste banker named Rosenthal, who had lent money to Baron von Roque on notes endorsed by his wife, and the Baroness came to New York with her son and daughter to defend it. The suit terminated in 1880, with the defeat of the banker, and the Baroness and her daughter, who was then about eighteen years old, at once returned to Europe.

On the voyage they made the acquaintance of James Maybrick, who had been for a number of years in the cotton business in Norfolk and Baltimore, and in 1881 Florence became Mrs. Maybrick. From the evidence brought out at the trial of the latter, their married life does not appear to have been very happy. Mrs. Maybrick seems to have given her husband abundant cause for unhappiness.

To whom the letter intercepted by the customs was addressed, was named Bismarck. He is a dissipated looking man of about twenty-eight years, with reddish hair and whiskers, and Mrs. Maybrick's wanton affection for him is one of the strangest features of this strange story in real life.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, for children teething, is the prescription of one of the best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and has been used for forty years with never-failing success by millions of mothers for their children. During the process of teething its value is incalculable. It relieves the child from pain, cures dysentery and diarrhea, griping in the bowels and wind-colic. By giving health to the child it rests the mother. Price 25 cents a bottle.

MEDICINAL.

Wake Up.

If you wake up in the morning with a bitter or bad taste in your mouth, Langour, Dull Headache, Despondency, Constipation, take Simmons Liver Regulator. It corrects the bilious stomach, sweetens the breath and cleanses the furred tongue. Children as well as adults sometimes eat something that does not digest well, producing Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Restlessness, or Sleeplessness—a good dose of Regulator will give relief. So perfectly harmless is this remedy that it can be taken by the youngest infant or the most delicate person without injury, no matter what the condition of the system may be. It can do no harm if it does no good, but its reputation for 40 years proves it never fails in doing good.
